Local Farmers' Markets

Farmer's markets are the best place to access a wide variety of local foods. Nearly every community in Northwest Illinois has one or more markets established. Because market days, times and locations often change within the year, instead of listing each individual market, we urge you to contact the University of Illinois Extension Office at 815-235-4125.

Pretzel City Kitchens is a new food incubator located in downtown Freeport. Food entrepreneurs, local food producers, caterers and food trucks will be using the kitchen to develop their food businesses. There will be culinary classes for personal enjoyment, food safety and preservation training for certifications, and other opportunities to grow the food system in northwest Illinois. Open for use with limitations during the Covid -19 situation. Call to get updates on usage of the Pretzel City Kitchen.

Northwest Illinois 2020 Directory

Compiled by the Northwest Illinois Audubon Society and the University of Illinois Extension Stephenson County

Purchasing from the local farmers during the Covid -19 situation is a great way to support local farmers during tough times and promote environmentally friendly practices. To keep shoppers and suppliers safe many of the farmers and farmers markets are offering online or phone orders. Some are offering delivery and drive-through services. Utilize Facebook or make phone calls to the farmers to verify the type of services offered for 2020.
