Greater Peoria Region: Counties

Is 60 miles too far to go for great local food? While there are delicious treats that might be worth an even longer trek, all of the farms, markets, and restaurants listed in this guide are within 60 miles of Peoria County and in the state of Illinois. Many of them are closer.

There are 33 counties—not to mention several cities and an uncounted number of farms and gardens—full of local goodness within this “Greater Peoria Foodshed”. This guide lists sources of local foods available to north-central Illinois residents.

Greater Peoria Region: Farmers Markets

1: Market information from USDA Farmers Market Database and LocalHarvest.org (Accessed February 2015), and independent research. Maps are for reference purposes only and should not be used for navigation!

Farmers markets are the “poster child” of local foods, and for good reason! Markets provide regular opportunities to “meet the grower”, and some markets also host arts and crafts vendors, or some provide live music, cooking demonstrations, and entertainment.

Regional farmers markets generally begin in May or June and run through October, though some indoor markets, such as the Methodist Center Atrium Farmers Market in Peoria and Illinois Products Farmers Market operate during winter months.

Most farmers markets in the region accept credit card payments, and several can accommodate WIC and SNAP benefits. Payment types accepted at each market are indicated in the chart below with C (Credit Cards Accepted), W (WIC accepted), and S (SNAP accepted).

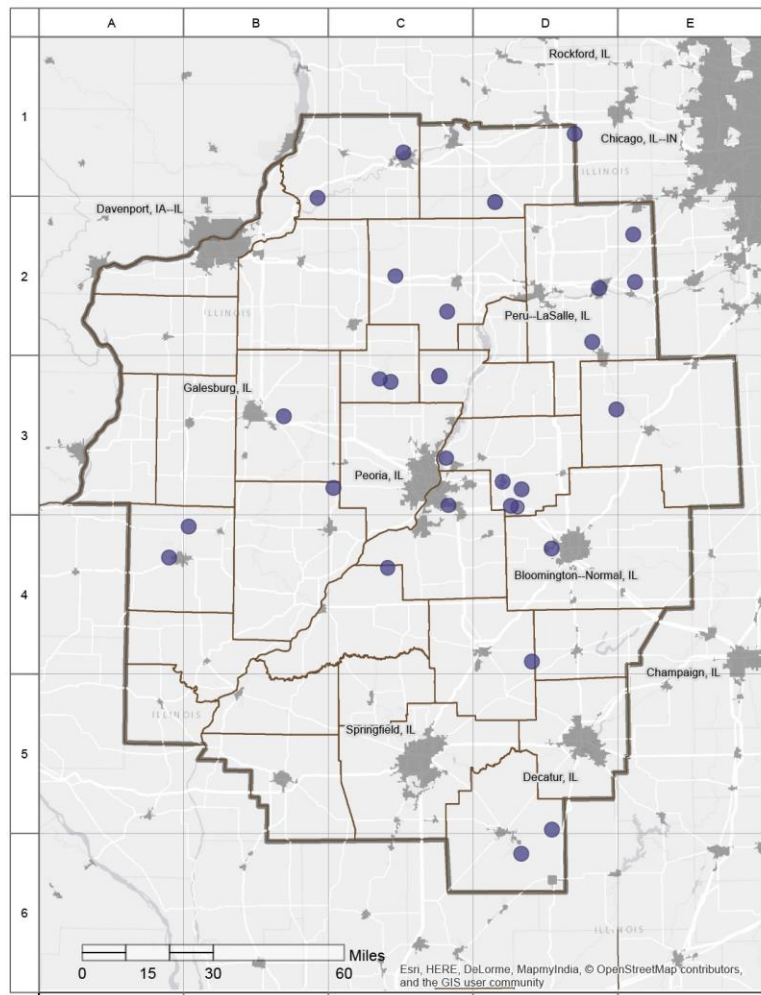

More information for each market can be found online on the websites listed below, or through the online version of this guide.

Greater Peoria Region: CSAs

2: Community Supported Agriculture information from USDA's CSA Database and LocalHarvest.org (Accessed February 2015), IRRRA's Illinois CSA Directory (2007), and independent research.

Maps are for reference purposes only and should not be used for navigation.

Fresh local produce—delivered! Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) programs unite growers and consumers in financing locally grown foods. Provide “seed money” by pre-purchasing “shares” of a farm’s production, receive a fraction of whatever is grown at prearranged intervals; pickups of produce typically occur every week or every other week at growing sites, farmers markets, or other designated locations. Twenty-Seven CSAs are located in the foodshed. Most provide seasonal vegetables, while some make fruits, flowers, herbs, eggs, milk, or meat.

Prices and purchasing options vary by farm. Some offer half shares or add on items to allow consumers to tailor their purchases. The actual amount of received in each share is representative of the farm’s production, with most CSAs reporting smaller shares early in the growing season and additional items at the end of the summer. Prepare to buy a share early in the year, as many local CSAs sell out before summer!

Farm Fresh sales

It doesn't get much better than just-picked—or just picked up—produce! Farm stands, U-Pick farms, orchards and wineries, and on-farm pickups for Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) programs provide a shopping experience that's more fun than your ordinary grocery store.

Growers appreciate their short commute for on-farm sales, and consumers may enjoy the opportunity to see where food is produced. Producers providing on-farm sales usually participate in other retail markets as well.

Staffing for farm stands may be provided during normal business hours for more permanent operations, or may be limited to evening or weekend hours during season, or only an hour or two per week for CSA pickup sites—so call or click ahead before you head out!

Greater Peoria Region: On Farm Sales

6: Restaurant information from the Illinois Stewardship Alliance Local Flavors guide (Accessed May 2015) and interviews with Peoria-area diners.

Maps are for reference purposes only and should not be used for navigation.

What makes a restaurant “local”? Is it the restaurant location itself important—a “local” café around the corner from work? Does it matter where the owners live, and if so, how close is close enough? Should fast food franchises be counted—they are, after all, locally owned! Can a national brand like Chipotle operate a local restaurant?

Or do the foods served determine whether a restaurant is local? If so, how? If you’d like to “eat local” at a restaurant, your best approach might be to ask if your favorite eatery serves local food. Maybe they do, and you have a new reason to love an old favorite! Or maybe you will spark their interest in serving local products. Either way, you will likely learn something new about where your food comes from.

A select number of restaurants that actively promote their use of locally sourced foods are included on this guide. Because restaurant menus—and restaurants themselves!—change frequently, there may be restaurants that are not included on this list. Consider this section of the guide a starting point and continue to search for local foods when you eat out.
